1. During the first week of January heavy weather made harbor traffic light. Three large Soviet freighters with a combined tonnage of 8500 took on case goods. Some of these were large electric motors; others held Diesel motors destined for Leningrad. There was a small amount of optical goods from Jena for Moscow. Optical goods from Rathenau were observed for the first time.
2. During the second week of January, the bad weather continued. Four Soviet freighters took on case goods, including uniforms for the Red Army, surgical instruments, optical goods from Jena, and azimuth-circles for artillery. On 13 January, a freight train delivered a load of airplane motor parts, bridge trusses and 19 mine locomotives.
